FROM: XMT LIQUIDATIONS INC., ITS COURT-APPOINTED LIQUIDATOR (THE "LIQUIDATOR")

Since reporting to you on September 20, 2010, there have been a number of developments related to the Liquidator's court application seeking authority to examine individuals having knowledge of the Tokwiro Group's affairs. The court ordered a settlement conference which took place before Mr. Justice Morawetz of the Ontario Superior Court on October 13, 2010. In addition to the Liquidator, the following individuals were present at the conference:

Joseph Norton and Paul Leggett of Tokwiro Enterprises ENRG and Blast Off Limited;

Ron Janusz of Avoine - Serviço de Consultadoria e Marketing, Lda, the Belize company which allegedly held security on the Absolute Poker assets;

Stuart Gordon, of Blanca Games Inc., the alleged acquirer of the Absolute Poker assets including ub.com.

All parties were represented by counsel. Because of a Court imposed confidentiality clause, the Liquidator cannot report on what transpired during the conference. However, the conference did not lead to a settlement.

Accordingly the Liquidator is continuing to pursue other remedies in addition to the court application seeking examinations. The Liquidator anticipates receiving the non-US resident database out of escrow over the next week and will actively pursue any opportunities to derive value from this asset. The Liquidator is also initiating steps to enforce Excapsa's security interest against various domain names (including ub.com) and will hold Tokwiro Group and Blanca Games Inc. fully accountable for revenues and benefits derived from these domain names. The Liquidator is concerned that the assets of Blast Off have been deliberately stripped out from the company in order to defeat Blast Off's obligations owing to the Liquidator and the ability of the Liquidator to pursue any commercially sensible remedy from Blast Off. The Liquidator intends to pursue its legal remedies against those persons and entities, in their respective jurisdictions, who assisted or were in knowing receipt of such stripped out assets and, to the extent that it makes commercial sense, such remedies will be pursued.

The Tokwiro Group and its management recently alleged that they are the victims of a "newly discovered" cheating incident dating back to 2004 which caused former Chief Joe Norton to abandon the internet gaming business and has given rise to new alleged claims against Excapsa. To date, the Liquidator has been unable to determine whether or not such a claim has any real basis. Even if there is a basis to support such an alleged new claim, the fact remains that the Tokwiro Group bought the Excapsa business on an "as is, where is" basis and has also provided various releases of claims as a result of certain past renegotiations. As a result, the Liquidator is of the view, based on currently available information, that the Tokwiro Group's ability to successfully advance such a claim (even if such a claim does in fact exist) against Excapsa is very low.

The Liquidator's concerns regarding the conduct of the Tokwiro Group continue to escalate. The Tokwiro Group has consistently failed to honour its agreements starting with a default in 2007 well before the allegations of any unfair play became known. The note payments, which were to have increased to US $2 million per month in December 2007, were reduced to US $500,000 per month in November 2008, yet since that time the Tokwiro Group has on at least four occasions failed to meet its minimum payment obligations. Furthermore, the Tokwiro Group has provided financial statements to the Liquidator indicating that, while Excapsa's notes were in default, substantial payments were made to parties not dealing at arm's length with the Tokwiro Group. Lastly, just 2 months ago, on August 5, 2010, the Tokwiro Group agreed to weekly payments only to decide, a mere few days later, to walk away from the whole debt as a consequence of an alleged "newly discovered" cheating incident dating back to 2004 which the Liquidator has been unable to substantiate.

The Liquidator will continue to actively pursue all recourses and avenues to maximize recovery for shareholders.

Dated this 15th day of October, 2010.
